

COMMUNITY CARE

Working with organisations such as Headway...gives staff an appreciation of their own health and wellbeing. They return to work feeling a lot happier about their own lives.

- RALPH DOEDENS

"Working with organisations such as Headway (a community based rehabilitation service for people with acquired brain injuries) gives staff an appreciation of their own health and wellbeing. They return to work feeling a lot happier about their own lives," Ralph says.

"They enjoy being able to make a contribution and, for many staff, it's just the start. We have quite a few staff that have started volunteering in the community in their own time now as well as through work."
